

THE CASE

Young Writers invites you into the thrilling world of crime and mystery writing with Unsolved..

There are 8 fantastic story starters to kick-start your gripping mini saga (a story told in just 100 words!)

Whose point of view will you choose to write from?

The Suspect?

The Victim?

A Juror?

A forensic scientist?

A witness?

Will you choose to solve the crime, or leave the reader shrouded in mystery?

Whether you enjoy a good old mystery, want to make sure justice is served, explore forensics or imagine a death-bed confession, Unsolved helps you plan and write a mini saga, engage with creative writing and create original ideas!

Check out the video that introduces the activity to you in just a minute: (add you tube link)

THE SCENE TOP TIPS

Suspect. Fugitive. Victim. Cop. Witness.
Pathologist. Judge. Reporter. Lawyer.
Accomplice. Perjurer. Bounty Hunter.
Juror. Accessory. Informant. Forensic scientist... Ask students to work in pairs to write opposing points of view
using the same story starter.

Discuss types of crime – think outside the murder box! From corruption, theft and framing someone to trafficking, cybercrime and miscarriages of justice, the crime and mystery genre has lots of ideas to explore.

Get your students inspired by detective fiction – from Arthur Conan
Doyle and Agatha Christie to Carolyn Keene, Eoin Colfer and Nancy Springer, set students the challenge to read and learn whodunit writing tips from these literary masters!
